WORKING PAPER

SUMMARY OF INFORMATION:

1. Items in the Area of Interest: Four portions of the area were accessed:

"A" appeared to contain a very large object which sat on a pedestal, supporting a device which consists of a squarish box on one end, double tall, rounded "arms" along its length, and a flat plate on the other end. This flat plate appears to have a tapered hole in it (with the taper toward the inward side of the plate). See sketches on pages 1,2,3, & 4 of the transcript.

"B" has strong feelings of warmth, vibration, and power. It "runs" continuously. Stage 7 impressions indicate that it is a "driver" of some sort. It is electrical/electronic in nature, rather than physical. A sketch of the components of this area is shown on page 6 of the transcript.

Outside "A" and "B", I found a set of levers, (AOL: like those used in a hydraulic crane).

"C" has two parts:

A rounded portion which contains panels, lights, drawers, and new-smelling equipment. This area is warm, but the surfaces feel cool to the touch.

A squarish portion which gave me a strong physical jolt when I first entered it. The immediate impression was that of a strong tesla coil field. I was not able to access it again.

2. I tried accessing the personnel on the ship to discover the nationality. The language was vaguely familiar, sounding quite a bit like Russian, but was not Russian. It was mostly vowels with slurred consonants. Accessing the radio operator, I got him to say "one", and it sounded like "OHD-nuh" (AOL: Bulgarian, Turkish, or Greek).
3. Still accessing the radio operator, I got him to say the name of the ship over and over. It was badly slurred, so I finally asked him to spell it out over his radio. The letters were also badly slurred, but what I got sounded like "KARODEN" or "KAROTIN".
